

Steven The Worm And The Giant Apple

By David Dorantes
Illustrated by David Dorantes

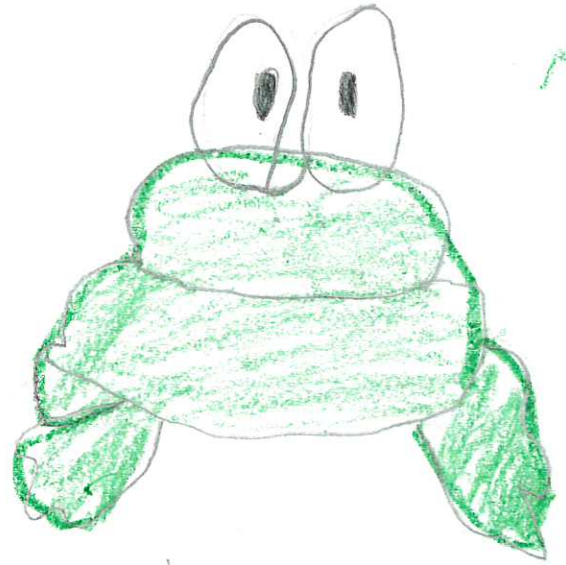

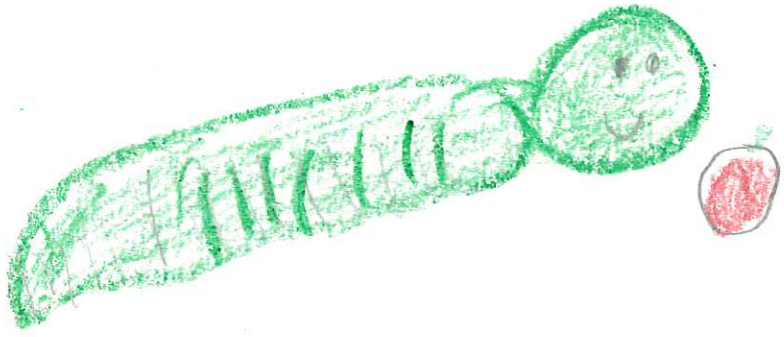

Once upon a time, there was a little worm named Steven.

Steven was so hungry that he was looking for food.

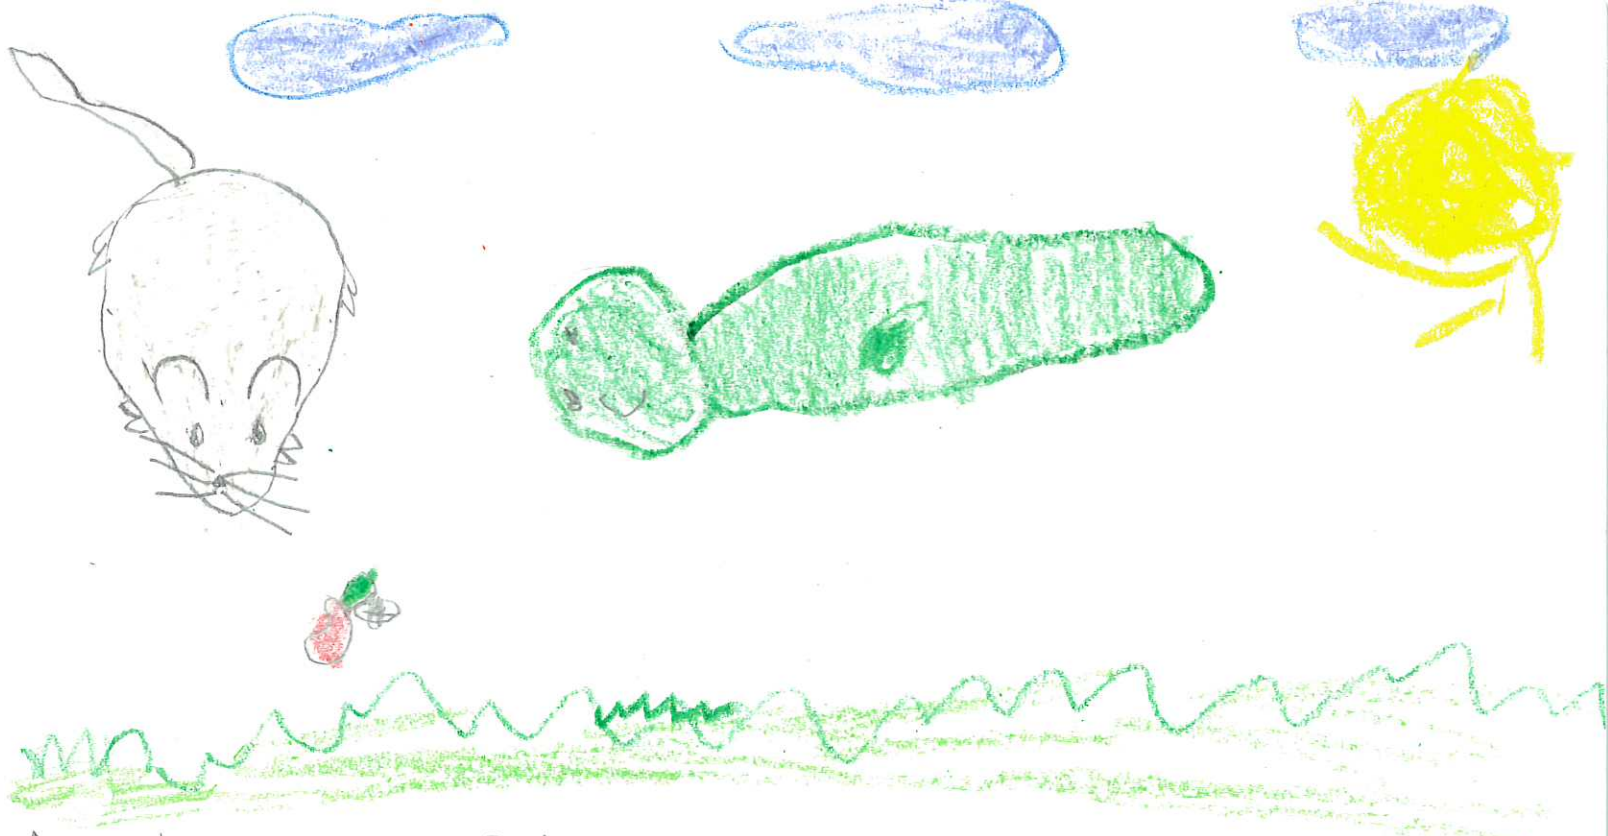

Suddenly he saw a big apple tree but it only had one small apple.

Steven was about to eat it when suddenly his friend the frog came.

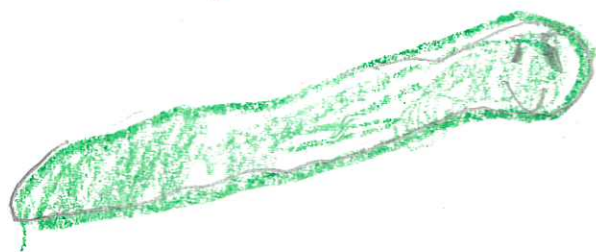

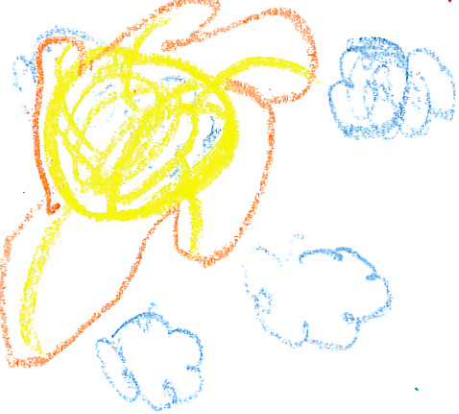

The frog was also hungry, so Steven gave him a piece of his apple.

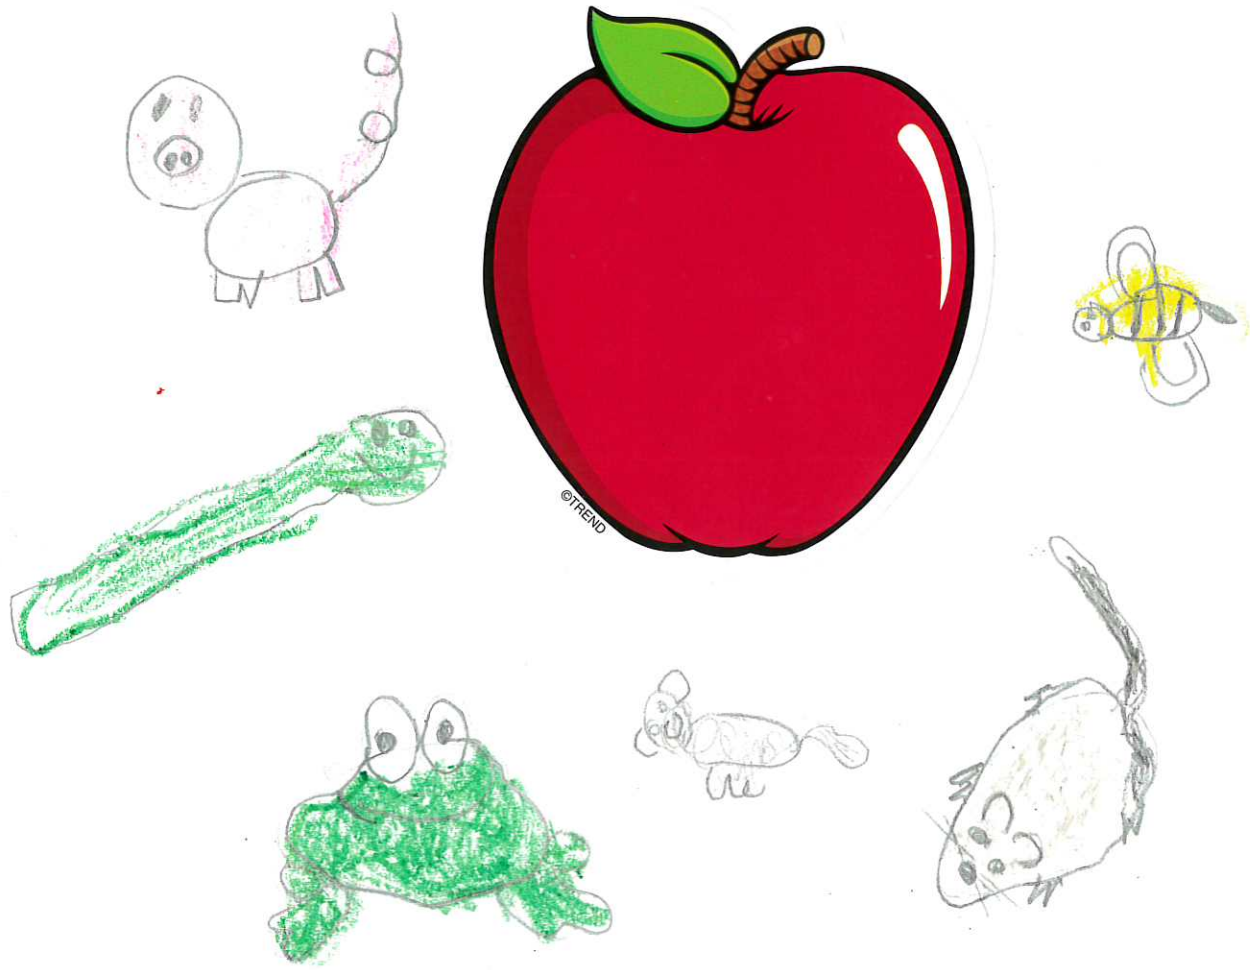

Steven had a little piece left for himself but then Tommy the mouse came and he was hungry too so Steven didn't mind giving him the last piece of the apple.

Although Steven didn't have any apple left for himself, he was very happy because he had shared with his friends. However, he was still hungry so he started looking for more apples.

Finally he saw a giant apple, the biggest and juiciest apple in this world. It was red and shiny and looked very delicious. Since was a giant apple Steven had enough to share with his friends and other hungry animals. And he would still have enough left over for himself.

So, he was glad he found this apple because sharing was important for him. It made him happy and proud.

The end